Co-op FAQ – Employer Perspective

What is Co-op?
An MLIS Co-op Placement is an enrichment opportunity for students to work and learn in an environment that relates to their course of study. Students report to an experienced supervisor who oversees the student’s training and day-to-day duties.

When are co-op placements offered?
Co-op placements may occur during any of the following terms:

- WINTER January – April
- SUMMER May – August
- FALL September – December

How long are co-op placements?
Co-op placements may extend for one or two terms. The Co-op Program requires that each co-op term extend for a minimum of 14 weeks. It is up to the employer to decide if they would like the placement to extend for longer than 14 weeks.

What are the specific start and end dates for co-op placements?
Co-op placements start in January / May / September and finish in April / August / December. The specific start and end dates are at the employer’s discretion but may be negotiated between the employer and student.

What criteria are there for employers who are considering offering a co-op placement for an MLIS student?
Each new co-op opportunity is reviewed before it is offered to students. The Manager of Graduate Student Services looks at the following criteria when deciding whether or not to approve a co-op placement:

- Are the duties well suited for a Master of Library and Information Science student? Will a student be adequately challenged?
- Will there be suitable supervision (co-op supervisors need to have an MLIS degree or suitable LIS experience in order to ensure that the student has adequate support during the placement)?
- Does the placement meet the other basic requirements (Is it a paid placement? Does it extend for a minimum of 14 weeks?)

How many co-op terms may each student complete?
Students may complete one or two co-op terms (for a total of 8 months). The co-op terms may be with the same employer or with different employers and the terms may be consecutive or non-consecutive (i.e., a student could spend one term in school then one term on co-op followed by another term of school and then another term on co-op followed by the final term of school). Students must have at least one course remaining following their final co-op term.

Are students paid while they’re on co-op?
Yes. The pay rates are set (and paid) by the employer and will vary. The Co-op Office suggests an hourly rate of $18-22 but some employers may pay more or less than this amount. Placements with the federal government use a set pay scale (see Appendix A #3). The Co-op Office can provide employers with suggested pay rates.

Are there any additional administrative fees associated with hosting a co-op student?
There is an administrative fee to participate in co-op which the student pays (it is similar to a tuition fee).

What status will a student have while on co-op?
The student’s status will be listed on their transcript as “Part-time Co-op.” Co-op students are required to return to return to their academic studies immediately following their co-op placements.
What are the timelines for co-op applications?
The general timelines for processing co-op placements can be found on our website. For specific dates please contact the Co-op Office or ask to be put on our email update list.

May all MLIS students participate in co-op?
No, in order to be eligible for co-op students must meet the following requirements:

- An overall course average of at least 75% with no individual course mark below 70%.
- By the time a co-op placement begins they must have completed at least four MLIS courses including: LIS 9001 Perspectives on Library and Information Science; LIS 9002 Organization of Information; LIS 9003 Information Sources and Services; and LIS 9005 Managing and Working in Information Organizations.
- Students must be "returning students" (i.e. they must have at least one course yet to be completed after their co-op placement ends).

Is co-op a mandatory part of the MLIS Program?
No, co-op is an optional enrichment opportunity. A co-op placement will extend the length of time a student takes to complete their MLIS degree; it does not take the place of the academic course requirements.

Do employers get to screen candidates?
The Co-op Office forwards applications from interested students to employers. It is up to the employers to decide which candidates they would like to interview. Interviews may be completed over the phone or in person at FIMS. The Co-op Office will arrange the interviews according to the employers’ and students’ availability during the set interview period.

How does the ranking process work?
Employers and students are asked to submit their rankings immediately following the interview period. The rankings are used to match students and employers. For more details on this process, please click here.

When will employers find out whether or not a student has been matched with them?
The Co-op Office emails employers first, and then students, to let them know the outcome of the ranking process. The announcements are made as soon as possible following the ranking deadline (usually within two business days).

Once a co-op student has been hired, is it possible to extend his/her contract? If so, for how long?
Yes, employers may invite their current co-op student to stay on for a second co-op term (unless the student has already completed two co-op terms). The student may choose to accept or decline the offer.

Are there any kinds of subsidies available to help students relocate to placements that are far away?
Some employers offer students a relocation subsidy in order to off-set any costs associated with moving to a different city. If the employer does not offer this type of subsidy students may apply for funding through the Co-op Office. Limited funds are available and may be targeted specifically to support those students who will be moving out-of-province.

What happens if the co-op supervisor is unable to supervise the student for the duration of the co-op term?
Unexpected staffing changes can occur. If a situation arises where the designated co-op supervisor is no longer able to supervise a co-op student, please contact the Co-op Office as soon as possible. In most cases a substitute supervisor may be able to fill this role in order to continue the placement.

Is it possible for two people to co-supervise a student?
Yes, several organizations have done this in the past. It is up to the organization to decide whether this will work well for the co-op placement to be a success. At the end of the co-op placement the supervisors may complete separate or joint evaluation forms.
If I offer a co-op placement am I guaranteed to get a student?
Most employers who participate are successfully matched with a student. If, however, an employer is not successfully matched with a student (there is a small chance - about 10% - that an employer may not get a student matched to them), the Co-op Office will follow up with each affected employer to discuss possible next steps.

What can employers do to increase their chances of success through the posting/screening/ranking processes?
In order to increase the chances of success through the hiring process employers should:
- submit their posting as early as possible (late postings tend to get a lower response rate)
- interview as many applicants as possible (in order to keep the pool of potential candidates as large as possible)
- do your best to sell the students on your organization (students will also be ranking each employer; the higher an employer is ranked by the students, the more likely an employer will be matched)
- rank as many candidates as possible (this will increase the chances of being matched)

What should an employer do if their workplace requires security clearance?
Some organizations require a security or background check before a student can be hired. It is up to the employer to decide whether to begin this process during the interview period or after a specific student has been matched. Since the process can be costly and lengthy, the decision is left with the employer to decide what timing is best for them. At the employer's request, the Co-op Office can help to forward any necessary forms to the student.

Where are co-op placements typically located?
Co-op placements can be located anywhere in Canada but most tend to be in Southwestern Ontario and Ottawa.

What is the typical employer-to-student ratio each term (based on the number of positions offered and the number of students interested in participating)?
The employer-to-student ratio is typically around 1-to-1.

What happens if a student cannot complete the placement?
Emergencies and/or other unexpected situations may arise. In the case of an unexpected situation, employers and students should respond directly to any immediate concerns. Once the immediate situation has been dealt with, please contact the Co-op Office so that we may follow up as necessary.

What support is offered to new employers?
The Co-op Office is open Monday to Friday 8:30am to 4:30pm EST/EDT. The Co-op Program staff includes MLIS Co-op & Graduate Programs Assistant and Rosanne Greene (Manager of Graduate Students Services, FIMS).

Does the faculty or university pay the student or does the employer?
Co-op students are paid directly by the employer. The Co-op Office can provide employers with suggested pay rates.

Who decides on the start and end dates for co-op placements?
Employers may set the start and end dates for placements (as long as the placement extends for a minimum of 14 weeks and occurs during the co-op term). Some employers may choose to ask for the student's input when deciding on the specific dates.
